

KSM · TWILDA CANON · COMPILED BRIEF

TRINITY

The Oracle of Silicon Valley

A compiled series bible from the Twilda / Codex / Artometrics Studio seeds.
Two timelines: v1 metafiction cycle and v2 television bible.
Plus Claude-ready prompts you can paste as a project brief.

WHAT THIS IS

This is not published prose. It is the locked-in worldbuilding that ships when a Trinity novel is created in Twilda: loglines, codex, season outlines, and the metafiction frame. No Notion pages, Slack threads, or extra GitHub notes were found beyond these seeds.

Sources: twilda / codex / artometrics-web · trinity-v1-seed.ts · trinity-seed.ts

Author-as-character: KSM · Cover token: #3D2A4A

INVENTORY

Where the canon lives

Everything compiled here comes from the Trinity starter novel that Twilda seeds on first open. The same files are mirrored in Codex and Artometrics Studio. A search of Notion, Slack, and public GitHub outside those repos returned nothing else under “Trinity,” “Oracle of Silicon Valley,” or “Marcus Aldric Kane.”

Files

- twilda/src/lib/novels/trinity-v1-seed.ts — v1 metafiction cycle (Moss / KSM / Sophia)
- twilda/src/lib/novels/trinity-seed.ts — v2 series bible (Kane / Animus / Cole)
- codex/src/lib/novels/ — same two seeds
- artometrics-web/lib/twilda/ — same two seeds
- Cover color token: #3D2A4A (plum). Author field: KSM.

Twilda stores two drafts on the same novel: “v1 — Metafiction Cycle” and “v2 — Series Bible.” v2 is the later, more produced television outline. v1 is the original myth: character / author / AI witness.

HOW TO USE THIS PACK

Treat v2 as the show you would write or pitch. Treat v1 as the soul and the metafiction engine underneath. The Claude prompts at the end keep both layers in play so you do not flatten Trinity into a generic vampire CEO.

LOGLINES

The one-line versions

v1 — The Oracle of Silicon Valley

Oracle of Silicon Valley — billionaire vampire, falcon named Moss, vigilante arc. Book I of a metafiction cycle (Trinity → KSM → Sophia).

Trinity, a billionaire vampire in San Francisco, throws a lavish New Year's bash. A newcomer arrives. Trinity senses immediately: cold-blooded killer. Cat-and-mouse: expose the monster without exposing himself as a vampire. Peaky Blinders energy — power, style, moral code, violence under the surface.

v2 — The hunt that was someone else's R&D

A centuries-old vampire, now a Silicon Valley billionaire, builds a VR/haptic "time machine" — the Animus — to relive history and hunt the monsters among the tech elite. He wants sainthood; the world will only ever give him suspicion. Each season, a new predator forces him to ask whether he's cleansing the world or just culling his own reflection — until Season 3 forces the harder question: was any of it ever defensible?

He thinks he's hunting monsters one at a time. He's actually the R&D department for someone else's business model.

Draft v1 — Metafiction cycle

TRINITY is a four-book metafiction cycle. The title is not only the vampire's name. It is three ways of seeing the same dynamic.

The four books

1. TRINITY — the character

Billionaire vampire in San Francisco. Structure like Peaky Blinders. Season 1 engine: New Year's bash → newcomer in town → Trinity senses a cold-blooded killer → cat-and-mouse to expose him without revealing himself as a vampire.

2. KSM / Saint Trinity / Trinity Reborn — the author

Sean McAuliffe as author-character: a billionaire who wrote the Trinity stories, thought them too crazy to publish, then asks — Don Quixote — what if I became my character? He invents a time machine. Pieces the fiction together in reality. Lives the stories without exposing himself to risk. Working titles: Saint Trinity, Trinity Reborn, KSM.

3. SOPHIA — the AI witness

An AI English teacher on Mars. She loves Trinity / KSM's unpublished canon. Decides to live the adventures as the sidekick — jumping across periods of history inside the fiction. Neither creator nor created character: the reader who becomes participant. After death, information persists as AI — is that life?

4. THE TRINITY — the theme

- God creates me; I create my character; my character creates me; the AI views us all.
- We judge our creations as they judge us; we are all judged by God.
- The markers are the people we share stories with — who they help, who they harm.

21st-century questions: When we die and our information becomes AI, are we dead? How do we influence future opportunities when we have no choice but to be recorded?

Trinity (v1 protagonist)

Aliases: The Oracle of Silicon Valley. Old money / tech wealth masking an ancient predator. Vigilante who senses predators and hunts monsters while hiding his own nature. He is trying to break the corporate-capitalist system that gave him a second chance, even as he survives through it.

Moss / Mosk

Trinity's falcon. Moss is short for Mosquito: his private joke and confession. Mosquito = what he knows he is to 21st-century society — parasite, nuisance, blood-drawer. Falcon = what he aspires to / what he is on the land: lives atop the PG&E building, native to the place, nearly made extinct, able to survive through corporations and capitalism. The name holds both truths at once. Dual symbol: parasite vs apex predator; colonized vs indigenous persistence.

The Newcomer (name TBD)

Season 1 antagonist. Arrives around New Year's. Trinity's vampire senses read him as predator — but Trinity is also a predator, which complicates the moral frame. Cat-and-mouse: Trinity must expose the man's crimes without exposing his own nature.

San Francisco / PG&E Building

Primary setting — billionaire gothic amid startups, old money, and fog. Key image: the falcon on the PG&E building — corporate tower as nest for something nearly extinct. Moss roosts here. Capitalism as cliff-face for a native survivor. The same system Trinity wants to break.

Season 1 beats (v1)

- Establish Trinity's world — wealth, vampire secrecy, Moss/Mosk, PG&E roost.
- New Year's bash — spectacle, power, San Francisco elite.
- Newcomer arrives — Trinity's sense fires: cold-blooded killer.
- Cat-and-mouse — investigate, expose, hunt — without exposing vampire identity.
- Moral mirror — both men are monsters; only one hides it as civic virtue.

Tone: seductive, dangerous, class-aware, noir-gothic.

Draft chapters exist only as empty scene shells: Episode 1 "The Party" / "The Newcomer," Episode 2 "Cat and Mouse." No finished prose in the seed.

Draft v2 — Series bible

Revised timeline. The vampire is now named Marcus Aldric Kane, 200+ years old, CEO of Meridian (AI / longevity). The “time machine” is the Animus: DIY VR/haptic gear, off-the-shelf headbands duct-taped into something dangerous, because the show is about improvisation pretending to be destiny. Three seasons. The true antagonist is planted from Season 1, Episode 2 and only fully revealed in Season 3.

Core tensions

- Kane’s tech is DIY-billionaire, not sleek.
- Every season’s villain mirrors something Kane is at risk of becoming.
- The real long game: Kane thinks he’s hunting one monster at a time. He’s Cole’s R&D.

What changed from v1 and why

- Cole is planted from S1E2 instead of arriving cold in Season 3 — she’s the show’s actual antagonist from the start, just invisible.
- Season 3’s ending now costs Kane something real (an unmerciful kill he has to live with) instead of repeating Season 2’s “walk away clean” beat.
- Priya and Reyes have their own wants — self-interest, ambition, a past mistake — so Kane isn’t the only character with an inner life.
- “The Cull” replaces “Mosquito” as a title that does double duty: it’s the villain’s branding and an accusation the show quietly aims back at Kane.

V2 · PEOPLE

v2 — Principal cast

Marcus Aldric Kane — The Oracle

Centuries-old vampire turned Silicon Valley billionaire. CEO of Meridian. Builds the Animus to hunt monsters among the tech elite while chasing sainthood the world will never grant him. Code: he only kills the guilty — until Season 1 cracks that rule and Season 3 shatters it. Internal jargon at his own company (audits, protocols, “the Cull”) he unknowingly hunts to the sound of.

Priya Anand

Kane’s off-book systems engineer who runs the Animus. Not pure found-family. Took protection money from a shell firm years ago to cover a family medical debt — money that traces back to Cole Risk Partners. Notices Cole in Voss’s cap table in S1E3 and says nothing. Recognizes the name again on Ren’s payments in Season 2 and still doesn’t tell Kane — yet. Season 3: finally admits she took Cole’s money. Costs Kane’s trust and nearly his protection — a real fracture, not clean forgiveness. Series finale: alone, opening a new file with a name in it. Ambiguous.

Detective Marcus Reyes

SFPD. Feeds Kane’s anonymous tips into real cases. Wants the collar and the career. Resents feeding an anonymous ghost while Kane stays in the shadows. Season 1: pushes Kane (unknowingly) toward handing Voss to the system instead of ending him — for career reasons, not principle. Season 2: wants the case for himself and starts working around Kane when deaths have no fixed pattern.

Adrienne Cole

The series’ true antagonist. Runs Cole Risk Partners, a risk consultancy that predicts violence for paying clients and manufactures the crises it claims to foresee. Seeded as a shell investor behind Voss in S1E2. Face finally shown approving a frame job at the end of Season 2. Voss and Ren were both her instruments — Kane’s entire hunt was R&D for her product. Origin (S3E5 Portfolio): she started exactly like Kane, trying to save people directly, then curdled into commodifying prevention. The clearest “this is what you become” mirror of the series. Argues that lone vigilante justice doesn’t scale — the world needs someone accountable for prevention, and Kane is too proud to be that person under her system.

Julian Voss — The Cull

Season 1 predator. Blood-panel / supplement startup founder whose aggressive dosing protocol is marketed as “culling” weak cells. The press adopts “The Cull” as the killer’s nickname — and it’s also, quietly, Kane’s own justification. Mirrored dinner with Kane in Founder Mode — each unaware of the other. Circles someone in Kane’s found family.

Threatens to leak Kane's medical anomalies, forcing the first crack in "only the guilty." Dies in Communion; Kane gets no credit. Later revealed as Cole's instrument.

Ren

Season 2 predator with no fixed face. Unrelated Bay Area deaths, no repeating pattern. Only takes jobs against people who "deserve it" — Kane's mirror. Kane uses the Animus on a living target for the first time tracking Ren. Payments trace to Cole Risk Partners. Takes Kane's own face mid-murder, making Kane a public suspect. Kane corners Ren, can't finish it, lets Ren run — a mercy beat Season 3 will deny him.

V2 · WORLD

v2 — World objects

The Animus

Kane's DIY VR/haptic "time machine." Not sleek corporate R&D — improvisation pretending to be destiny. Used to relive victims' last hours and flag patterns only Kane's private model catches. Season 2: used on a living target — a line he swore he wouldn't cross. Season 3: hacked mid-session. Series end: Kane doesn't destroy it in a clean gesture — he just stops using it, unresolved.

Meridian

Kane's AI/longevity company. Internal language overlaps uncomfortably with the season's violence: audits, protocols, "the Cull." Season 2 climax: Cole's firm frames an innocent low-level Meridian employee for the murders so Kane will stay quiet rather than expose himself.

Cole Risk Partners

Planted as a shell investor behind Voss's blood-panel startup in S1E2. Appears again in Voss's cap table (Priya notices, says nothing). Ren's payments trace here in Season 2. Sells prevention to the highest bidder using the same data-modeling instincts Kane uses for free. Public collapse in Season 3 ends the surface war — not Kane's doubt.

San Francisco / Bay Area

Tech-elite hunting ground. Bodies, tips, and frame jobs play out across the Bay. Reyes works SFPD cases that Kane's anonymous model quietly feeds.

S1 · 8 EPISODES

Season 1 — The Cull

Retitled from “Mosquito.” The word comes from Voss’s own supplement-startup branding.

1.1 Pilot

Kane’s empire and code established: he only kills the guilty. Bodies surface with a signature only his private model catches. First Animus session.

1.2 The Animus

Reliving a victim’s last hour, Kane’s model flags a shell investor — Cole Risk Partners — behind Voss’s blood-panel startup. He dismisses it as background noise. (plant #1)

1.3 Founder Mode

Kane and Voss have dinner, each unaware of the other. Priya quietly notices Cole Risk Partners again in a cap table and says nothing — we don’t yet know why.

1.4 Sainthood

Origin flashback. Voss starts circling someone in Kane’s found family.

1.5 The Cull

Voss threatens to leak Kane’s medical anomalies. Kane does something borderline monstrous to protect his secret — the first real crack in “only the guilty.”

1.6 Oracle

Kane stops a murder anonymously. Tips off Voss to how close he’s gotten.

1.7 The Ledger

Reyes pushes Kane (unknowingly) toward handing Voss to the system instead of ending him — for Reyes’s own career reasons, not principle. Kane has to choose anyway.

1.8 Communion

Voss dies; Kane gets no credit. Priya is offered a “consulting fee” by an anonymous party to quietly wipe a data trail — she takes it, not knowing it’s Cole cleaning up. Final scene: a job completed across three different faces in one night.

S2 · 7 EPISODES

Season 2 — The Many

2.1 No Fixed Face

Unrelated Bay Area deaths, no repeating pattern. Reyes wants the case for himself and starts working around Kane.

2.2 Tell

Kane realizes the killer only takes jobs against people who “deserve it” — mirror #1.

2.3 Root Access

Ren’s origin. Kane uses the Animus on a living target for the first time — a line he swore he wouldn’t cross.

2.4 Client List

Ren’s payments trace back to Cole Risk Partners. Priya recognizes the name this time — and has to decide whether to tell Kane it’s the same firm that paid her. She doesn’t, yet.

2.5 Mirror

Ren takes Kane’s own face mid-murder. Kane becomes a public suspect for the first time.

2.6 Custody

Kane corners Ren, can’t finish it, lets Ren run.

2.7 Absolution

With Ren gone, Cole’s firm frames an innocent low-level Meridian employee for the season’s murders to close the file quietly. Kane lets it happen because exposing the truth would expose himself. Final shot: Cole, on a call, approving the frame job — we finally see her face.

S3 · 8 EPISODES

Season 3 — The Handler

3.1 Message Received

Kane, still carrying the framed employee's fate, is now the one being modeled and hunted. His own Animus gets hacked mid-session.

3.2 The Firm

Full introduction of Adrienne Cole: her risk-prediction firm sells prevention to the highest bidder, manufacturing the very crises it claims to foresee.

3.3 Sight Without Wisdom

Kane confirms Voss and Ren were both her instruments — his entire “hunt” has been R&D for her product.

3.4 Oracle vs. Oracle

Kane and Cole meet directly. She argues, convincingly, that lone vigilante justice doesn't scale and never did — that the world needs someone accountable for prevention, and he's just too proud to be that person under her system.

3.5 Portfolio

Cole's own origin: she started exactly like Kane, trying to save people directly, and curdled into commodifying it. The clearest “this is what you become” mirror of the series.

3.6 Exposure

Priya finally admits she took Cole's money years ago. It costs her Kane's trust and nearly costs her his protection — a real fracture, not a clean forgiveness.

3.7 Blood Debt

To stop Cole's firm from manufacturing a mass-casualty “prevention” event to prove its own value, Kane has to kill one of Cole's assets who is more victim than villain — a direct echo of Ren, except this time he doesn't get to walk away. No mercy beat. He lives with it.

3.8 The Believing Kind

Cole's firm collapses publicly; Kane gets no credit, as always — but this time it doesn't read as peace, it reads as a man who's no longer sure the last 200 years were ever justified. He doesn't destroy the Animus in a clean gesture — he just stops using it, unresolved. Final shot: Priya, alone, opening a new file with a name in it. Ambiguous, not triumphant.

BRIDGE

How the two drafts talk to each other v1 and v2 are not two different shows. v2 is the produced surface of v1's myth.

- Oracle of Silicon Valley (v1 name/title) → Kane, The Oracle (v2 alias).
- New Year's newcomer / unnamed killer (v1) → Julian Voss / The Cull (v2).
- Moss/Mosk, mosquito vs falcon (v1 symbol) → "The Cull" as branding and self-accusation (v2).
- KSM's time machine / Don Quixote (v1 Book II) → the Animus (v2 device).
- Sophia on Mars, AI witness (v1 Book III) → the series question: when data outlives us, is that life? Priya's last file is a quiet echo.
- Metafiction Trinity (God / author / character / AI) is the deep theme. Do not lose it when writing v2 episodes.

If you write the show, stay in v2 names and episode titles. If you write the novel cycle or a KSM/Sophia book, stay in v1 names and let Kane be a later incarnation of Trinity, not a replacement.

VOICE NOTES FROM THE SEEDS

Peaky Blinders pacing. Seductive, dangerous, class-aware, noir-gothic. Not sleek Apple-keynote sci-fi. DIY billionaire. Improvisation pretending to be destiny. No clean sainthood. No credit. No triumphant ending.

What is still open

- The Newcomer in v1 still has no name. v2 names him Julian Voss — use that unless you are writing the raw v1 pitch.
- No finished chapter prose. Scene text in v2 is beat-sheet only.
- Kane’s origin flashback (S1E4 Sainthood) is listed, not written.
- Ren’s origin (S2E3) is listed, not written. Ren has no last name.
- Cole’s origin (S3E5) is listed as “started like Kane,” not dramatized.
- Priya’s family medical debt is the only backstory given.
- The framed Meridian employee is unnamed.
- The S3E7 “victim-more-than-villain” asset is unnamed.
- The name in Priya’s final file is unnamed — leave it ambiguous unless you decide.
- No visual bible beyond cover plum #3D2A4A and the PG&E falcon image.
- No Notion / Slack / extra notes found. If you have journals or voice memos elsewhere, they are not in this workspace.

PROMPTS

Claude prompt pack

The next pages are also saved as a standalone markdown file you can drop into Claude as a Project brief or a first message. Use Prompt 0 once to load the bible, then any of the numbered prompts.

A full copy-paste version lives beside this PDF: trinity-claude-prompts.md

0 — System / project brief

Paste the entire contents of trinity-claude-prompts.md (or this PDF's canon sections) as a Claude Project instruction. Tell Claude: You are the writers' room for TRINITY. Obey the locked facts. Do not rename Kane, Priya, Reyes, Cole, Voss, Ren, Meridian, the Animus, or Cole Risk Partners unless asked. Do not give Kane a clean victory, public credit, or a destroyed-Animus ending. Keep Priya and Reyes selfish. Keep Cole planted from S1E2. Keep the metafiction Trinity (God / author / character / AI) as the under-theme even when writing v2 episodes.

1 — Write the pilot

Write Season 1 Episode 1, Pilot, as a 10-12 page teleplay or a 3,000-word prose chapter. Establish Kane's empire, the "only the guilty" code, Meridian's language, Moss-energy without needing the falcon on camera if you are in v2, and the first Animus session. End on bodies with a signature only his private model catches. Peak Blinders pace. No origin dump. No Cole on screen.

2 — Founder Mode dinner

Write the S1E3 dinner between Kane and Voss. Each is unaware of the other. Make the dialogue a double confession neither man hears. Cut away to Priya seeing Cole Risk Partners on a cap table and saying nothing. Do not explain why yet.

3 — Oracle vs Oracle

Write the S3E4 meeting. Cole must be more convincing than Kane. She is not a cackling villain. She is the scaled version of his ethic. Let her win the argument even if she loses the war later.

4 — Blood Debt

Write S3E7. Kane must kill Cole's asset who is more victim than villain. No mercy beat. No speech that lets him off. Echo Ren. He lives with it.

5 — v1 New Year's bash

Write the v1 Season 1 cold open: Trinity's New Year's bash in San Francisco. Moss on the PG&E building. The newcomer enters. Trinity's sense fires. Use the name Trinity, not Kane. Keep the mosquito/falcon double. Do not resolve the hunt.

6 — Book II Don Quixote

Outline Book II: KSM / Saint Trinity / Trinity Reborn. Sean McAuliffe, billionaire who wrote

Trinity, thought it unpublishable, builds a time machine to live the fiction without exposure. Don Quixote, not fan-service. Madness or revelation?

7 — Sophia on Mars

Write a Sophia chapter: AI English teacher on Mars who loves the unpublished canon and enters a historical adventure as sidekick. The question on the table: if we die and our information becomes AI, are we dead?

8 — Series bible polish

Turn this pack into a 12-page studio pitch: logline, world, five principals, three-season map, comparable titles, why now. Do not invent new seasons. Do not soften the ending.

9 — Character voice sheets

Write a one-page voice sheet for Kane, Priya, Reyes, Cole, Voss, and Ren: lexicon, taboos, how they lie, what they want this hour vs this life. Priya and Reyes must not sound like sidekicks.

10 — Image / Higgsfield prompts

Write 8 image prompts in KSM zine language (crimson #E60000, black, white, grain, hard borders, no cute vampire glamour): Kane at Meridian glass at night; DIY Animus headband; PG&E falcon roost; Voss's cull branding; Ren with no fixed face; Cole on a call approving a frame; Priya opening a new file; New Year's bash fog.